

LONG BIO:

In the trenches of a well-paid CPA firm, learning first-hand the hard cost of disengagement, Josh Schneider knew something had to change - so he did something about it. He formed a coaching company to work with organizations and individuals to increase performance, energy, and disrupt traditional work patterns. As the impact of disengagement rose in the marketplace, Josh wrote the book Generation NEXTLEVEL, which calls the next generation of leaders to play to their strengths and do work that matters.

To widen the scope of his work Josh founded The Millennial & Employee Engagement Institute to curate and develop research to really discover what drives humans and the real impact engagement has on business results. From labor studies and engagement work with global companies, to working with local industry - Josh understands the future of the workforce and how it needs to be disrupted today for better results tomorrow. He has been featured on Under30CEO and the CEOhour talking about business and human performance with strategies for truly thriving at work.
